In a world with lots of words, only some can stand out and be brilliant. To be a chosen word you must have spirit, determination, and a little Mawty Haswick, just as do the Dragons. Johnston High School in 1992 can be described in such words.

Few words can express the changes occurring in our school and community. JHS is on its way to becoming the largest, as well as one of the best-known schools in this area. With the passing of the 1994 bond issue, many modifications are on the WQV. Ryan Flynn shared his thoughts on this issue, "It's a shame we have to resort back to Partington's childhood with the installation of outhouses, but anything to conserve water." Our administration hopes this will be a progressive move for Johnston.

We burst onto the scene this year, thriving in music, athletics, academics, and much more, which isn't surprising considering our students and staff. We were encouraged to share our opinions about current issues in various activities, such as colloquial, newspaper, and many others. With a victory over Saydel, our baseball team headed for the state tournament. yearbook class took home a fifth place in the lowa High School Press Association Fall Yearbook Contest. Winning seventh in the State Swim Meet, the JHS girls swim team came back with a smile. Blythe Burkhardt qualified to be a National Merit semifinalist. It has been said that we are a diamond in the rough. It's now becoming apparent that we are shining through.

Seasons change and time goes on, but JHS in 1992 has left its mark. With so many strong leaders at Johnston High School, we will definitely have THE LAST WORD.

Students Suck Sweetness of Summer

Ah, the wonderful signs of summer... the sun on your face, a cool glass of lemonade, your feet splashing in cold water, and the cracking of bones. "My summer vacation SUCKED!" screamed Junior Mark Elliot, "After I broke my leg in a soccer game, everything became boring, even watching the ceiling fan goround, and round, and round and...well, usually that was pretty exciting." Mark's summer was spent sitting around in his Lazyboy and watching T.V. with his friend (Smokey, the family dog). Not everyone was as unfortunate as Mark, however.

"My summer was spent working with elementary to high school level boys, teaching first-aid and working with a registered nurse and first responder team. It was one of the greatest learning experiences of my life," reflected Matt

Tetzloff. Others wanted to study the growth of skin cancer, therefore Salorville beach was often packed, and the majority of the tanning crowd were from JHS.

If your time wasn't spent at the nearest water hole, you were bound to be out of town, and in some cases, out of the country. "Spending a week surrounded by castles and sophomores was an enthralling experience that I'll neverforget," said Jason Ranker. Jason was one of several JHS students who toured Europe in August.

Some of us attended different camps throughout the country. Heidi Johns and Andrea Haag went to a church camp and experienced some new things. "I rode a jet ski for the first time," said Heidi, "and unlike Andrea, I was lucky and didn't wipe-out."

With school on the back burner of our brains, the great summer adventure had just begun, and would seemingly come to too soon of an end.

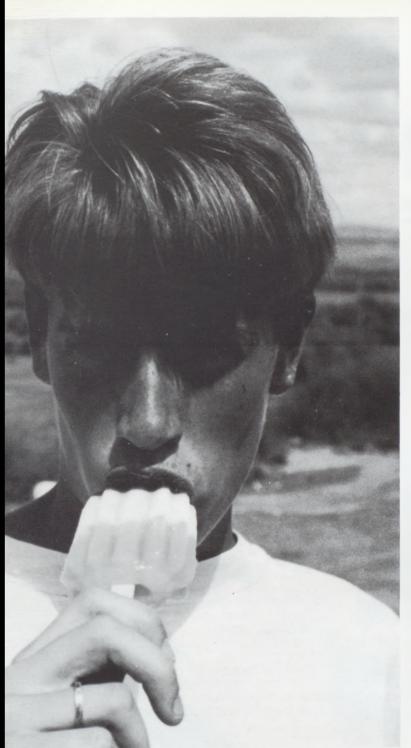

The summer was one to never forget, and with the char marks on our backs, we probably never will.

Sucks in Student Body

Homecoming week has always meant a lot of Class of the Year Points. Students were sucked into working hard to prove their Dragon Spirit was the best.

The contests began Monday with Hat Day. On Tuesday, seniors wore their favorite sheets while the rest of the student body went back to the 70's with polyester. Dress-up day, Wednesday, allowed students to show off their Sunday bests. On Thursday, students strutted the halls with clothing on backwards. The freshmen placed first in this contest.

The class halls provided the next spirit competition. The seniors placed first, the juniors second, and the freshmen third. Although the sophomore hallway placed fourth sophomore Elaine Jarnagin said, "The freshmen hall was really neat, but I thought our hall was better planned and had more to do with the theme, Gaining Momentum."

Competition continued outside at the parade. Again the seniors prevailed in the float contest.

The final competition of the night was the Club Olympics. While some were competing to win, others were competing to not get caught cheating. Sophomore Heather Zortman said, "We were looking at other people and trying to find ways to cheat, but it didn't work because we got disqualified for almost every event."

The fun didn't end there for the upperclassmen and cheerleaders. T.P.ing began around 11:00 p.m. and didn't stop until about 2:00 a.m.

Although half the student body hadn't slept more than five hours they were still in great spirits for Purple and Gold day. On Friday, everyone was ready to cheer the Dragons onto a victory against Saydel.

Decking Out and Soaping Windows to Make Homecoming Sparkle

The students were overcome by curiosity as they scrambled to find a seat on the bleachers of the gymnasium. The overflowing student body had been kept in suspense for two days, until the morning of October 2, when homecoming king and queen were declared.

The tension was high while Sarah Hartle stood behind the king candidates: Justin Allen, Brad Beaman and Jason Rollison. The crowd roared as she crowned Jason. The next few moments must have seemed like an eternity to the queen candidates: Jenny Duckworth, Emily Hicks and Morgan Holcomb. At the height of suspense, Emily was crowned and applause stormed the gym. "I felt like I was in a dream," Emily remarked about being queen.

That afternoon, the cheerleaders and pom squad members did an outstanding job getting students pumped up for the night's game. They performed dances, including one to Hammer's "Gaining Momentum," our Homecoming '92 theme. There were motivational speakers and skits, including one where some senior players were blindfolded and asked to guess which cheerleader had kissed them. They later found out it was their parent. All of this contributed to our victory over Saydel.

The following night was the dance. Couples and individuals strolled into the gym for the final event of the week. "My favorite part of the dance was when Joe McClung and Jorgy showed off their musical talents by singing 'You've Lost That Lovin' Feeling'," said junior Wade Sewell.

Another popular activity was decorating the school. Many students' weeknights were spent tossing an estimated 430 rolls of toilet paper. "The teepee was much more creative this year with the 'for lease' signs and traffic cones. The soap on the windows and the artificial snow was a nice touch," commented sophomore Brad Rippey. According to sophomore Jill Norveil, "It could have been topped only by putting sheep in Marty's office." The decorating job remained throughout the next week, reminding students of one great Homecoming.

HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT LEGALIZING MARIJUANA?

There is no doubt about it. Marijuana should remain illegal. Pot is not only addicting but it is deadly. This drug harms the user and it doesn't stop there. Families can be devastated and the innocent can also become involved. Is it really fair for an unborn child to be hooked on pot before they even begin their own life outside the womb? There is no reason to make this drug available to kill.

-Julie Cottrell '95

The legal drugs in our country are equally as dangerous as the "illicit drug" marijuana. Each day people consume tons of caffeine, nicotine, and alcohol. Alcohol kills the most people, nicotine is the most addictive drug on the market, and caffeine is fairly addictive. Marijuana does no more than these. Therefore, legalization (perhaps with a legal age limit) wouldn't be a problem.

-Jason Pace '93

though the child, whether in the mother's womb or not, should have the right and the chance to live. When the baby is conceived it is a life, a living being. Therefore, killing or aborting It would be murder. You need to think of what that child may have before him or her in their life. If you don't want a child take the proper precautions, but don't resort to abortion as a way out of vour carelessness. Roe VS. Wade should definitely be overturned.

Yes, I feel as

-Tim Halling 96

DO YOU THINK ROE VS. WADE SHOULD BE OVERTURNED?

No, abortion should be kept legal. I'm not necessarily in favor of abortion and I would only use it as a final possible solution. But I don't think the government has the power to interfere with a woman's right to choose. If abortions were outlawed, illegal and unsafe abortions would happen anyway.

-Justin Allen '93

Junior Heidl Zeiger and her friend from Roosevelt High School, Brad Skirnick brought food and clothing to underprivileged kids in California.

DO YOU FEEL IT IS O.K. TO BE SENDING FOOD TO THIRD WORLD COUNTRIES INSTEAD OF THE UNITED STATES HOMELESS?

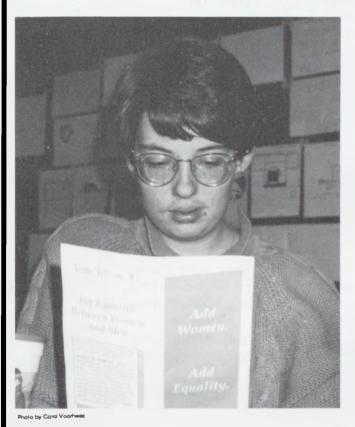

No, I don't think it is O.K. I think our country should come first. If we didn't send so much money and aid to other countries we could help the homeless a lot.

-Jed Tank '95

I don't see how the so called countries could be a priority in deciding who gets help. The only priority I see who is the most in need. We should erase the boundries of all the countries, and start seeing all the people of these countries as one nation, one race, the human race.

-Josh Doster '93

JHS Students Speak Out

With the presidential election, it was not an uncommon sight to see JHS students debating over the latest political issues. The yearbook staff selected some of these issues and asked the student body to answer them. The most convincing answers were Chosen.

-Carol Voorhees

Yes or no? Senior Corby Cavanaugh thinks about her decision on the ERA. The ERA was rejected on November 3 in

HOW WOULD YOU VOTE ON THE ERA?

Race, gender, and sexual orientation have no bearing on an individual's superiority or inferiority. Our constitution should reflect that value. Our constitution should represent the ideal society, one in which everyone is equal. The only real arguments in opposition to the ERA are purely political. Ideas about tax money and abortions, along with homosexual marriage have no relevance to this issue. In this country, true freedom is not possible without equality, and wasn't our nation founded upon freedom?

-Jenny Smith '94

I unequivocally support women having equal rights with men, but I do not believe that the ERA is the best way to secure these rights. Women's rights are already guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, the lowa Constitution, and federal as well as state laws. Rather than adding a new amendment to the constitution, we need to make sure that the present laws are enforced. A constitutional amendment cannot and will not, in any way, add greater power to the present laws.

Retreat Slides With Success

Thursday, November 5, buses were loaded as snow flurried about the anxious campers. It was time for the fifth annual Leadership Retreat to begin.

Opening ceremonies were held. Many activities were planned for the 184 JHS campers during this three day event, one of the first being a "getting acquainted" activity.

Campers were then asked a series of questions that provoked discussion and allowed the groups to find out something new about each other.

Dr. Ray Pugh spoke after lunch. He shared Walt Disney's think, believe, dream, and dare philosophy.

Following dinner the traditional telling of the Warm Fuzzzie Tale took place with narrator Skeeter Thompson. Campers were shown how to use their warm fuzzies and soon the camp was aglow with happiness.

To wind down the day, the choices of attending a dance or night hike were given.

Friday, Dr. Thomas Evans spoke on teenage sexuality and abstinence. Friday was filled with small group activities that ranged from the "blind walk" experience for first timers to teenage sexuality debates for second timers. "I think I gained the most out of the small group sharing times because I learned to respect people more and to accept their good and bad qualities," expressed sophomore Bobby Johnson.

The day ended with a display of hysterical skits. "First place goes to Carol Voorhees and Martin Poock with their Jeanette and Jerry impressions!" exclaimed senior Joe Barnard. The candle lighting ceremony was also a special moment that will be remembered by all.

Saturday, pictures were taken, bags of good feelings were exchanged, and "Friends Forever" was sung by all at closing ceremonies. The unexpected "Bang!" of the cannon ended the weekend.

Support New Leader

"I accept, tonight, the responsibility you have given to me to be the leader of this, the greatest country in human history." As President-elect Bill Clinton addressed a crowd in his home state of Arkansas, he graciously accepted his election for President.

Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore received 43 percent of the national vote, President George Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle 38 percent, and Independent Ross Perot and Admiral James Stockdale 18 percent. The Clinton/Gore ticket also got 349 electoral votes, 79 more than the 270 needed to gain the presidency.

Ross Perot was the first to concede from the race. In his speech he stated, "We must all work together to rebuild our great country."

In his concession speech, Bush asked his supporters to "stand behind our new President." Bush was Vice President for eight years prior to the last four years as President.

As Clinton prepared to lead the country, he commented on the need to, "bring our people together as never before so that our diversity can be a source of strength in a world...where everyone counts and everyone is a part of America's family."

More students, Fewer tunds

May of 1992, Johnston graduated 100 seniors. August of 1992, 185 freshmen entered the high school. With the recent budget cuts to the district, the high school wasn't given nearly $283,560 which was to pay for the added 85 students.

The budget system used was called Advance For increased Enrollment. Instead of receiving state aid for new students who entered the district that year, the money wouldn't be received until the following year.

According to Superintendent Dr. Richard Sundblad, "This year $673,872 was not received for the 202 new students grades K-12, because of the Advance For Increased Enrollment,"

Since the district didn't receive the much needed state aid, it put a lot of restraints on the staff and students. Teachers had to watch the amount of paper they used for their classes. Also, it wasn't possible to purchase many new textbooks. "One of the major effects the cuts have had is that teachers are buying fewer learning materials for their classes," said High School Principal Tom Downs.

Class sizes became larger due to the inability to hire additional staff. As a result, individual student attention was limited. Assistant principal Marty Harswick said, "The number one effect has been that the size of classes in the math, science and social studies are higher than what we would like to keep them. Fortunately, students and staff have taken that in stride."

Guilty Verdict in Diner Slayings

Around 6:00 pm on November 29, 1992, a man entered the Drake Diner. Responding to his muffled request, manager Cara McGrane turned to help him. The man held a gun to her face and shot. McGrane, age 25, was killed instantly. Upon hearing the shot, manager Tim Burnett rushed to the front, straight toward the gunman. The man then shot and killed Burnett, age 29.

Six days later 17-year-old suspect Joseph White was taken into custody. Through weeks of testimonies many people, including Diner employees and customers, identified White as the killer. On May 21, 1993, the jury announced a guilty verdict. White was convicted on two counts of first degree murder and one count of first degree robbery.

Immediately after the verdict was made public, protesting groups formed around the city. Des Moines' Black Ministerial Alliance led a march at the Polk County Courthouse complaining of racism and unfairness in the trial. Plans of an appeal were made, and an uneasy feeling spread across the city.

Stand-off in Waco

On April 19, 1993, America watched the end of a 51-day stand-off literally go up in smoke. David Koresh and 86 Branch Davidians were being consumed in the flames.

The feud started February 28, when federal agents stormed the compound outside Waco, Texas. Ranch Apocalypse was thought to be holding illegal firearms.

On March 19, doses of tear gas were pumped in, and smoke was seen rising from the building. Although surviving cult members denied it, federal agents claimed the fire was part of a suicide plan. Nine cultists escaped the flames, but the rest, including Koresh, were presumed dead.

Students Ignored While Ignoring the Norm

Ignoring the norm of JHS, several student athletes dared to expand Johnston's horizons. Because of their early stage of development, hockey, bowling, and boys' volleyball had very few spectators. They literally had to fist fight for publicity with little support from the school.

"It wasn't really the small crowds that got under my skin. It was the fact that these crowds consisted of my parents and neighbors," stated junior Jon Yanders, bowling team member who scored a perfect game of 300.

"It's time for these guys to finally get the longawaited recognition that they deserve," said team sponsor Larry Strickler. "I told them a victory means a free drink...Pepsi that is."

"The most memorable part of my volleyball career," stated senior member Justin Reis, "was when an unidentified member of the team invited some girlies over to our hotel room when we were in Minnesota at a tournament. Needless to say, we played pretty well the next day." Despite their slow start at the beginning of the season, the Johnston/Valleyteam brought home a second place trophy at regionals.

Maneuvering around two Sloux City opponents, Junior Luc Cisna retrieves the puck. The Johnston/Urbandale/Valley team

Bowling fanatic Joe McClung said, "So for all of you who didn't even bother to show up, eat puck, go spike yourself, and bow! this one baby!"

A Whole New World

There will never be more primping for an event other than the Junior/Senior Prom. Students work months to pay for their outfits. Girls buy a dress they will only wear once at a price that could outfit them for a semester. Guys suffer with an ill-fitting tuxedo and the outrageous price of dinner, all the while griping about how they have to wear a stupid flower.

As this year's juniors and seniors entered "A Whole New World," their minds were temporarily cleared of these worries. The Drake Olmsted Center was decorated in a sealike splendor. Chris Hanner and Mimi Bobst were crowned Prom King and Queen. According to junior Nicole Buban,

"It was nice to see some different faces, not the same of same of."

The prom committee's time and energy was repaid with a successful dance. Students filtered out as the last song was played, preparing for the night still ahead.

Surf's Up-Hang Ten was the theme of this year's After Prom party. Oscar Mayer weiners and Baskin Robbins ice cream were munched on as After Prom-ers participated in games and various activities. Black jack, craps and Twister were three of the most popular games. The senior slide show was a new addition to the After Prom party. "I preferred having the slide show at After Prom. It was more organized than previous years. Having it at the After Prom party gave us more time at prom," said senior Tricia Perkins.

A highlight of the evening was John Ivan Palmer, a hypnotist from Minnesota. He entertained with a hysterical display of hypnotized audience members. Participants were seen swishing through the spin cycle of a Maytag. Senior Cam Christensen could be heard yelling, "Where's the beef?" Junior Bradie Knapp eagerly greeted Jeremy Heinen, supposedly wearing his BVD's.

On May 28, relatives and students packed into the gym, anxiously waiting to acknowledge the Class of 1993. The seniors lined up alphabetically outside the gym doors to make one of their final appearances.

Senior Heather Henning said, "I was nervous, excited and sad all at the same time. It was finally my turn to take part in Class Day, and yet all I could worry about was tripping in the spotlight. The realization of never being together as a class again made me wish high school would never end."

The cheerleaders danced their last dance; the mementos were presented and staff, students and relatives were able to congratulate the seniors with hugs, kisses and lots of pictures.

Then it was off to open house after open house. From Friday to Sunday the parties never seemed to end. "There are so many open houses that I'd like to go to at the same time that it's hardtogettoeveryone's. Maybe I'll skip my own party," said senior April Bitterman.

After the Sunday morning parties some graduating seniors chose to attend baccalaureate while others waited to arrive in their assigned rooms just before the ceremonies. Senior speaker Chris Hanner spoke about a poem he wrote for graduation, and senior Jill Olsen talked about the lessons of life.

Following the student speakers, diplomas were handed out, and underwear flew with the caps into the air. Senior Justin Christy said, "It's like an out-of-body experience. When Are We Ever Gonna Use This?

mathe matics n. The science of numbers and their operations, interrelations, combinations and a bunch of other stuff that may or may not be used in life.

"When will I ever use this stuff?"

This question could be heard among many JHS students about math. Math was one of the five major subjects every student took during high school. Classes like algebra I & II, geometry, trigonometry and calculus were available to students. Even when all these math courses were completed, the question still was "Where does someone use any of this information?"

Many students used the math courses as preparation for college. "I'm still in math because it's a prerequisite for the veterinarian program I want to go into in college," said senior Amy Tomenga.

One other aspect of math was competition. Many students competed every year and applied their skills to something outside of homework and tests. The math teachers encouraged students to participate in these competitions. "I encourage students because by taking part in the math competitions it helps them improve on their ACT scores, which will help them in life," said Mr. Gross, algebra teacher.

Another way to use math skills was for fun. Mrs. Van Farowe's geometry classes learned to use their math skills by dressing geometrically and designing ornaments at Christmas for the "Geometree." "I actually used some of the geometry that I learned to make my 'Geometree' ornament," said sophomore Kelly Kohles.

Whether it was Christmas ornaments or architecture, students at JHS learned that math became an important part of everyday life.

Time Out! We're Trying to Learn!

sci · ence. n. A lot of boring facts that teachers told us we would need to know for college. This definition might have been given by a number of students. Although these facts may have been tedious JHS teachers' personal traits made classes fun.

Anyone who had Mr. Mahoney would answer, "Time out. We're trying to learn here," when asked about his favorite phrase. He also liked to relate biology to athletics. Senior Corby Cavanaugh gave an example. "My favorite story is about the toughest game a uterus will ever have to play - birth. How does false labor have anything to do with calisthenics?"

Mrs. Morris, biology teacher, was remembered for her experiment stories. "She told us about when she fed mice beer to see which one would live longer. I think it makes the class more interesting!" said sophomore Lynzee Mallett.

While the biology teachers were known for their humor, Mr. Partington, chemistry teacher, was known for his bluntness. Junior Wade Sewell said, "One day someone asked Mr. Partington if he got his haircut and he answered by telling him, no, he just washed it!"

The freshmen found that Mr. Briggs was a cool guy when it came to science teachers. He realized that tests can be hard when they included a lot of memorizaton. He let them write information on a notecard. Freshman Heather Battin said, "I think it is funny how he jokes about how small we write on the cards, but if I didn't I probably wouldn't pass his class."

Whether it was cracking jokes, using notecards, or relating birth to baseball, JHS science teachers amused their students while teaching the basics of science.

art n. anything academic that doesn't fall under math, science, language, or social studies. Here at Johnston, there were four major departments under this definition.

The most obvious of these was the Fine Arts department. "At JHS we have a fine, liberal visual studies program," said senior Jason Pace. "Mr. Weiss expects hard work and gives us the opportunity to create, critique, and discuss."

Discussion not only took place in the art room, but in the gym as well. One could have rarely walked into the gym and observed total participation by all the students. However, sophomore Sarah Schoper found a way to talk to her friends and receive her daily points. "When I play dodge ball, all I have to do is either stand by the guys or walk in circles so it looks like I'm playing."

Another of the arts offered was the industrial arts. A common misconception of this department was that it was only for those of the male gender. "It's not just for guys," said freshman Julie Morgan. "Women are becoming more involved in previously male-oriented fields."

Just as most people thought that the industrial technologies was just for boys, the same was true for the leisure arts and girls. "Almost everybody thinks that this is just a girls' class, but the guys contribute more in our class," said junior Kyle Dickey about his personal and family living class.

Be it fine or physical, industrial or leisure, everyone was involved in some way with the arts.

Why Do I Need To Take This?

social studies n. a class Mr. Doudna told me I had to take to graduate. While freshmen weren't required to take a social studies class, they had a choice of either Topics in Geography or Topics in Citizenship. Freshman Chad Stamps' reasoning for enrolling in both Topics classes was, "I like social studies and I like the fact that we get to study small town governments and large town governments."

World Studies was required for all sophomores. This class covered history from the first civilization to modern times. Mr. Lawler and Mr. Kinder tried to incorporate group work with lectures to increase the students' learning.

The juniors' schedules included U.S. History. The most memorable part of this class for many juniors was Mr. Kinder's sense of humor. Junior Chad Piper stated, "His first hour class was always the best because he made fun of current events everyday. It's not what he says, it's the way he says it."

The final mandatory social studies class was for the seniors. Government was taught to increase the students' awareness of the world and government policies. "Even though the whole election deal is still kind of confusing, government helped me learn more about the caucuses and primaries. This is one of the classes where I think what I learn will help me later on in life," commented senior Zeke Roberts.

Whether by choice or for fear of the guidance office, Johnston students have been involved in all things social... studies, that is.

What Are Il These Bonds?

language n. the study which creates bonds between one's thoughts and ideas and his or her ability to share and express these to others, the bonds between past and present and the bonds between different countries and cultures.

Students in such classes as freshman and sophomore English, speech, Advanced Composition, Creative Writing, American and World Literature and Advanced Placement English formed connections between their thoughts and others'. "When I wrote a poem or just a normal story in writing workshop I was able to express myself better and get my deepest feelings down on paper. Then when people read my papers they were able to understand better what I was trying to say," commented sophomore Andrea Haag.

Bonds were formed between past and present in Myths and Legends class. Senior Tracy Kane stated, "It's neat to hear about things that people actually believed a Iona time ago."

Foreign language also played a part in making ties between our country and culture and other countries and cultures. Language wasn't the only thing emphasized in the foreign language classes. Culture, traditions and holidays were also a part of the foreign language experience. A highlight of the classes was Foreign Language Week, which took place in April. The week included scavenger hunts with instructions in a foreign language and a flag identification contest.

Through learning the art of communication, students created bonds that influenced their perceptions of the world and the people around them.

After sophomore Todd Ferln's occupation description in speech class. sophomore Brian McLain interviews for the position, as Mrs. Coppock Interprets for Riley Iverson. This project educated students about various careers and the interview process, while also enhancing their speech skills.

In order to test their dictionary skills, freshmen Tammy Proehl and Heather Tuttle look up the meaning of "cyclorama." Dictionary skills were a part of the freshman English class' library unit.

Using their knowledge of French, sophomores Becky Floren, Rachel Graaf and Amy Ungenfelder teach a third grade class the song "Allouette." Mrs. Moermond's seventh period French III class made two visits to Wallace Elementary to prepare third graders for a visit from a French puppeteer.

To further their awareness of foreign cultures, freshmen Rhiannon Thoreson, Monica Wilg and Leslie Phipps participate in the flag identification contest. This competition was a part of Foreign Language Week.

After hearing the news that the team had qualified for the play-offs, senior Jake Oldham celebrates during the football game against Clarke.

SOARING TO STATE

"I had never been so nervous in my life. I thought I was going to be sick."

"We will be remembered for years to come as the first Johnston football team to make the state playoffs," commented senior Brad Beaman, second team all-district linebacker.

The season began with two non-conference victories. The first, against Clarinda, ended in a thrilling overtime. The second was against a tough Grinnell team.

The eighthrated Dragons were fired up for the game against rival Norwalk. However, their enthusiasm could not come through as the team dropped their first game of the year.

The Dragons defeated their next three opponents and had renewed confidence going into the Adel game. This would determine if the playoffs were a possibility. "The players' confidence was so positive that they were not going to be denied the victory," said Coach Garry Auxier. This great win put them in a three way tie for first with Norwalk and Adel. After a disappointing loss at Winterset, the final week became a must win situation against Clarke. They needed Winterset to lose and Saydel to beat Adel. Behind in the fourth quarter, the team heard over the loud speaker that both Winterset and Adel had been beaten. This sent everyone into a frenzy. "It was like a dream come true. Everything we worked for had finally paid off," said junior D.J. Danner.

The playoffs had arrived with the Dragons facing second-rated Harlan. "I had never been so nervous in my life. I thought I was going to be sick," said Junior Toby Baker.

The game had many highs and lows, one of which was when quarterback Wade Sewell ran for a touchdown, only to be called back by an inadvertent whistle.

Though the team played a hard fought game, they ended up losing 27-9. Coach Mike Halder said, "I was very proud to be part of the first team to make the playoffs...we are still striving to be champions."

CATCHING UP

" Our best games were were the best team we

-Zac Christensen 96

played.."

When talking about Dragon football in 1992, most people probably spoke of the varsity team's exciting play-off game. However, the freshmen and sophomore teams weren't far behind.

For the freshmen the year was one of learning and building. "In general the whole team improved offensively in their blocking skills and individual techniques. Defensively they became more aggressive and worked better as a unit towards the end of the season, said Coach Frank Baltzley.

Although they had a successful season, they learned from defeat. "Our most exciting game was citing citing game was against Grinnel. Even though we lost, we came back in the fourth quarter and came together as a team," said freshman Cory Kiper. The freshmen missed their final scoring drive that would have put them on top due to lack of time.

The freshmen also learned from the sophomore team. "Our best games were against the 10th grade team because they were the best team we played," stated freshman Zac Christensen.

The sophomore team had a very successful season as well, although it did have its ups and downs. The players started the season in new positions which got them off to a slow start. "Our first game we were a little rusty, but after we got our new quarterback (Chris Danner) things started to fall into place," said sophomore Jay Christianson.

After Danner replaced Christianson as quarterback the team's offense improved and combined with the defense to help them finish the season strong. The sophomore team played a very tough schedule against many JV teams. However, it was very rewarding to beat old rivals. "Beating Adel was exciting because every year they've kicked our butt!" exclaimed sophomore Brian Schock.

Both teams fought hard to catch up to their opponents and end the season with a win.

REACHING NEW HEIGHTS

"I just went out and played my hardest."

-Mimi Bobst '93

Experience was a quality prevalent on the varsity volleyball team. With all but one player returning as varsity this year, the team called on experience during each match. This experience allowed the team to remain relaxed even when they were down.

"It's good to be relaxed," said senior Sarah Hartle, "but you have to know when to be excited too. If you've got the momentum, you have to stay excited and play with the momentum. If you relax after taking a big lead, then you lose the excitement, and that allows the other team to make a comeback."

One of the many players responsible for generating this excitement was First Team All-Conference middle blocker, senior Mimi Bobst. "I just went out and played my hardest," said Bobst. She finished the season with 137 kills.

Senior Janie Jeffries led the team with the best serve reception percentage of 91 per cent. Jeffries didn't receive the recognition that the front row players got, but she didn't mind, "It didn't bother me that I didn't get much attention playing back row, but after playing four years of volleyball, I'm kind of used to it."

Jeffries was one of the three captains the team had this year. "We never had three captians before, so it was kind of interesting to see how it worked out," said senior Emily Hicks, setter, another captain.

The third captain was senior Morgan Holcomb. She was second on the team in best serving percentage with 91 percent. "You just have to relax, set up to the line, and do your job. It's that easy," she said.

What made it easy was the experience accumulated in past years while playing, the experience the entire team displayed, and the experience that led to a season filled with emotion.

A STEP AHEAD

As the warm ups tumbled to the ground, nervous bodies and stomachs hesitantly approached the starting line. Ever so slightly they leaned forward in order to gain the extra edge on the competition. In anticipation of the gun, thoughts of fighting the rugged terrain ranthrough the runners minds. The sound of the gun echoed through the air as the runners took off preparing themselves for the seemingly endless next few miles.

"The start of the race was always the worst, but after the first mile or so it was like running on air. My legs just went numb," said freshman Sari Roarick.

Cross country is a sport of endurance, especially during the race. Some runners relied on each other to make it through. "I always kept my sights on Grady, always trying to catch up with him," said freshman Matt Webster.

Junior Grady Tibboel was the boys' top runner. Tibboel holds the three top times since 1989 with his best time being at the Norwalk Conference meet coming in with a time of 17:25. He was also an All-Conference performer placing seventh.

Of the 35 team members 17 were freshmen, one of the youngest teams Coach Wandro has ever had. "I feel considering the young team, we accomplished a lot this year. This team was one of my best," expressed Coach Wandro.

The array of brightly colored flags formed the chute of the finish line, the last 25 yards were in sight. Runners began to step up the pace, faster and faster until the last moment when they raced across the finish line. Junior Andy Offenburger said the Urbandale meet was the worst because, " at the end of the race you always get cotton mouth. It feels like you're suckin' on wood." Exhausted bodies loaded the bus preparing themselves for practice the next day. With this meet behind them a sense of accomplishment rushed through their bodies, knowing that another rigorous challenge lies ahead they look forward to a good nights sleep.

Coach Shari Walling said, "This was the best girls team I've had since 1978."

The females weren't the only

The boys wrapped up the season with a third place finish in the National Conference, a second place finish at the district meet, an eighteenth place state finish and the team's first win over the Valley High School swimmers. They sent four Johnston swimmers to state competition: Adam Fausch, Dan Flannery, Grea Reed, and Paul Stover.

"At the beginning of "We knew we were in the year we set goals for hell when Shari we thought were reasonable. It ended up with a smile on her we made all of these and more," said senior co-captain Adam Fausch.

EDGING THE COMPETITION

*Playing well...boosted

This is summer and look where I am. I wait nine months to get out of this place and where do I go at this hour in the morning?!? To a stupid soccer practice. Thoughts such as these ran through the minds of tired Dragons more than once in the 1992 soccer season. Amid all the complaining, Coach Wandro's required Saturday morning practices paid off with a very successful season.

"One of the best things about our season was the fact that everyone pulled together at the beginning to give us a fairly good record," commented goalkeeper Matt Keltner. This strong start gave them an edge ahead of the competition, which was vital in games against their toughest rivals.

Although the varsity Dragons didn't accomplish their goals of winning conference and getting nine wins, they did make some noticable improvements. "Scoring victories and playing well against such teams as Valley and Dowling boosted our confidence level and gave us the push we needed," commented Coach Jim Wandro.

The Dragons progressed as individuals as well as a team. Forward Brian Billings led the team with 11 goals, 5 assists, and 27 points, closely followed by Kirk Ojendyk and Mark Gay. Four Johnston players were also chosen to be All-Conference Selections: Brian Billings, Kirk Ojendyk, Rian Bess, and Tri Le.

Lots of good memories were made along with an impressive conference record. "Besides the fact that Coach Wandro learned everything he knows about soccer from videotapes, we finished as one of the best teams in our conference," recalled forward Mark Gay.

Sacrificing Saturday morning cartoons to run laps and do drills was a small price to pay for the eventual reward.

butt."

Later in the season the team faced Pella Christian for one last time. The Dragons were undefeated in conference play, having won their first game at home with the Eagles. In order to win the conference title outright, they would need a victory.

The emotions were high and the spirit was willing, but the Dragons could not make it two in a row against the Eagles. The loss forced a tie for conference champs between the two teams.

Post-season play soon followed and now was the time for the team to pull it all together. The first game, at Saydel, was closer than expected, but the Dragons came out on top.

Two days later the team faced Adel-DeSoto. Wade Sewell commented, "Adel was our best game of the season. We were really focused and pumped up to kick their butt." Next, the Dragons were headed to the substate game with Carroll-Kuemper.

With the state

tounament just one victory away, the team approached the substate game knowing what had to be done. However, the Carroll-Kuemper Knights never let the Dragons into the game.

Coach Frank Sanders said, "At times we didn't play up to our potential, but as a whole the team played well together. Overall, the guys put forth a tremendous amount of effort which led to a season filled with success."

As he skies over everyone, senior Tom Miller extends himself for the easy lay-in. Tommy was one of the six seniors that finished the season.

BLOCKED EXPECTATIONS

"The coach was fair

about playing a lot of people, yet he still wanted to win. We usually did."

They come in all different sizes, and everyone has them, including the freshman basketball team. What are they? Expectations.

The team had high expectations for the season. "We went two years undefeated," said freshman Chad Markin, "but when it came time to play, we were working below our potential."

It didn't take long for the team to get back on track. Coach Jerry Kinder commented, "Winning against both Ankeny and Urbandale was a great experience. We had never won against Ankeny before. It was a great game."

The players combined their talents and stamina to present an outstanding offense, averaging 62 points a game. The large number of players didn't stop them from working as a team. Tim Halling explained, "The coach was fair about playing a lot of people, yet he still wanted to win. We usually did."

The sophomore boys weren't as optimists about their season. After suffering the loss of four out of five starters to the varsity team, they faced an uphill battle. "We really missed the leadership of Matt Sundblad and Chris Danner," commented Scott Good, "but we came together and worked hard to fill their places."

Coach Larry Lawler agreed. "The guys had a good attitude about the situation and wanted to overcome

-Tim Halling it."

One of the biggest games of the season was against Hoover, who was 14-0 in the Metro Conference. "We were expected to lose by 30 points. We lost, but we took them Into overtime and pushed them to their limit. No one expected it to be that close. It was exciting until the end," said sophomore Donny Tyrrel.

Both teams worked and played hard to achieve their expectations.

commitment."

Junior Amanda Brannan emerges from a mass of girls with the rebound. She quickly tosses the basketball to sophomore Elaine Jarnagin. Jamagin then passes the ball across the half court line to junior Iona Doster who sees that sophomore Megan Little is open and passes it to her. Little takes the shot. After a short hesitation on the rim, the ball falls through the net.

The season was an exciting but difficult one for the girls' varsity basketballteam. It was exciting because this was the last year they would play 6 on 6, but it wasn't an easy season. There were only three returning varsity players, and three starters were sophomores.

"Only having three returning varsity players put a lot more pressure on the youngerplayers. It really showed us the value of commitment," said Jamagin.

The lack of varsity experience had a profound effect on the season. Out of the 18 games played, they won only four.

"It was a real struggle being a senior this year because you knew last year's team had won a lot of games. It was very hard to keep your head up," commented senior Carol Voorhees.

In the Carlisle game the Lady Dragons were able to pull together as a team in order to beat Carlisle 47 to

45. Coach Justin Carlson said, "The showed us the value of Carlisle game was definitely our biggest win of the year. At the time Carlisle was rated fourth. The game gave us a big boost in confidence."

Even though the season didn't fulfill the players', the coaches' and the fans' expectations, many of the players agreed that it was a learning Sophomore Sarah experience. Schoper said, "This season taught me that cooperation is the key to a successful season. One really good player can't win the game for the entire team."

CHANGING OF THE GUARD

'The biggest change

was the emotional level. I played more

agaressively in 5 on 5

-Jenn Heinen '95

than I did in 6 on 6."

If someone asked a girls' basketball player what a guard is, he or she could get a couple of different answers.

One player might say that a guard is a defensive specialist. Another player might say that a guard is the ball handler. Why the discrepency? It is just one difference between 6 and 5 player basketball.

The sophomores started the seasonplaying 6 on 6. Then after Christmas the team switched between the two games.

"The hardest thing about switching back and forth was you'd be playing one type of game all week so you couldn't practice the other type, but the next week that's the type of game you played," explained Coach Rick Rynning.

The transition was difficult and their record reflected that. Not all of the conference teams wanted to switch mid-season so Johnston had to play them 6 on 6 and other teams 5 on 5. The sophomores focused mostly on learning the new game.

"The biggest change was the emotional level. I played more aggressively in 5 on 5 than I did in 6 on 6," said sophomore Jenn Heinen. The team won 4 of their 6 5-on-5 games.

The freshmen began the season playing 5 on 5 so the switch was easier, but it was still a big change..

"The team's strength had always been their defense. Although they learned the plays quickly, it took them awhile to recognize when to go on their own and use their athletic ability," said Coach Dave Beason.

As the season progressed the team improved. They won their last three games and two post-season tournaments, the Dowling Tournament and the Clarke Invitational.

"The most exciting games were against Winterset. We lost the first two by 3 and 4 points. Then in the fournament we beat them by 13. It was the greatest feeling!" said freshman Megan Bengard.

Although it took some time, both teams adjusted to 5 on 5.

Those early morning practices and the constant feeling of hunger while trying to maintain an exact weight proved worthwhile as the Dragons had one of their most memorable wrestling seasons ever. "It was a great year. The freshmen helped the team tremendously. The seniors went out in style with the school's best record ever," said senior Jason Rollison.

The team swept through the first fourteen meets without a loss. They then met up with Winterset and suffered their first setback of the year.

After this defeat they succeeded in winning the sectional meet at Johnston and advanced to substate competition. Here the Class 2A C they were defeated for the second to be winterset.

The Dragons finished the season with a 25-2 dual meet record. They won nine of ten tournaments and placed seventh overall in the state competition.

Coach Frank Baltzley said, "This was the greatest year we've ever had, with an outstanding combination of veterans and young wrestlers."

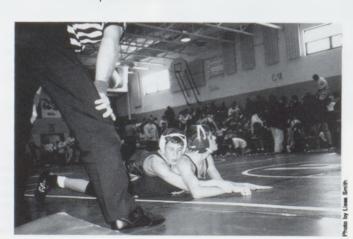

The Dragons also excelled individually. They sent eleven of fifteen wrestlers to the district meet in Nevada. Out of these eleven, seven advanced to the state tournament. They were Ben Barnes, Aaron Toney, Joe McClung, Tim Eblen, Shawn Mahoney, Brad Beaman, and Jason Rollison.

The state tournament went well as the Dragons came awaywith a sixth place finisher, Aaron Toney, an undefeated champion at 45–0, Brad Beaman, and the Class 2A Coach of the Year, Frank Baltzley.

Coach Mike Halder expressed, "I've been involved in many athletic activities, but being associated with the Coach of the Year Award and having Brad win the state title was very special to me."

HURDLING A RAINY SEASON

"Running in the rain is a challenge and an accomplishment."

Picture a girl running so hard that she collapses at the finish line. The second place finish was a personal best. Channel 8 captured the event on the news. It was not an ideal finish, but it qualified sophomore Kari Tank for the Girls' State Track Meet.

The girls' track team qualified in five other events which reflected a successful season. They placed first or second at the regular season meets and second in the Little Hawkeye Conference.

One of the most frustantian things a shout the trating things about the season was the weather.

"Running in the rain is a challenge and an accomplishment. Handoffs were difficult because the baton was wet and slick, but we always held on for dear life and tried our best," said sophomore Heather Wheeler. Despite the weather, the team kept a great attitude.

"When you have a great team and are having a lot of fun, you don't mind the weather," said Coach Craig Oldham.

The shuttle hurdle relay team broke the school record and finished second at the state meet. State qualifiers were sophomores Elaine Jarnagin and KariTank, juniors Amanda Brannan and Bradie Knapp, and seniors Mimi Bobst and Sarah Hartle.

The girls weren't the only ones placing at the state meet. The boys track team qualified in five events. Senior Brad Beaman placed sixth in the 110 meter high hurdles, and the 4x100 meter relay team (Zhao, Ross, Rittgers and Hill) finished third. Sophomore Brad Hartschen also qualified.

-Heather Wheeler '95

At the beginon was ning of the season many were unsure of how the season would go.

"The relays were all new because last year's seniors were gone. A lot of younger people had to fill in spots, and the older ones had to improve times. They did," said Rittgers.

The boys' team also finished second in the conference.

"It came down to the wire. We knew Nevada would give us a run for our money," said Coach George Sypniewski.

Atthough the two teams led two different seasons, the most important meets had similar outcomes.

Stretching to complete a hand off, sophomore David Rittgers accepts the baton from sophomore Brad Hartschen. The relay team of Rittgers, Tee Hill, Jeff Ross and Chen Zhao finished third at the Boys' State Track Meet with a time of 44.32 seconds.

ADVANTAGE JOHNSTON

"It's nice to be able to say that we have our vantage."

The sound of falling rain signaled yet another cancelled tennis meet, just one of many for the boys' and girls' tennis teams. "Johnston's major opponent was the weather. We had seven of twelve meets rescheduled due to the rain," commented coach Shari Walling.

The girls' tennis team had a cramped season. "With forty kids out and only six courts, practicing was a real hassle," remarked assistant coach Leslie Shipp. Many of the girls had been practicing in the off-season so even with this small amount of practice they were able to play well against tough teams.

The team improved their status by doing better than ever at sectionals. Two doubles teams beat third-ranked Urbandale but lost to Valley in the finals.

However, the most exciting part of the season for the girls' tennis team was, without a doubt, the finishing of eight new courts beside the high school. The school and the community shared the effort of building the courts. "Before we had these, Hyperion always let us use theirs. Now it's nice to be able to say that we have our own courts to give us the home court advantage," stated junior Nicole Buban.

The boys had a difficult time getting started, but not just because of missed practices. "We lost our top players from last year so we had to rebuild," said Urbandale-Johnston > coach Kirk Trow. "But everyone filled in well and worked hard."

> Confidence rose as they won their first few matches. They received fourth place at districts and got first place in the East Doubles Tournament.

Competition was not the only enjoyable part of the season. Freshman Casey Smith explained, "The best thing about this season was the road trips. The whole team got along well so we always had a good time."

By providing a place for improvement, the new courts let both teams overcome their slow starts. This factor, along with motivation, helped give Johnston the advantage.

Junior Shanna Galloway runs out of bounds to return a tough overhead. "I got the ball just in time, but my opponent thought it had bounced twice," said Galloway. "Her dad started yelling about the point, and we got into an argument right there on the court."

AIMING HIGH

"We focused on technique this season. Golf isn't as easy as it looks."

-Coach Steve Smith

Assembling the parts of a golf swing takes time and patience. Grip, stance, strength, weight, turn and follow-through are only a few of the key elements needed for this assembly.

"We focused on technique this season. Golf isn't as simple as it looks. If one part of the swing is just the least bit out of place, the stroke is ruined. Each girl concentrated on her own weakness at practice. Everyone shot her best round at one time or another this year and I feel it was definitely due to the focus on technique," said Coach Steve Smith.

The girls' golf team saved its best golf for the right time. Johnston came away with a second place finish in the sectional meet at Winterset. This advanced them to regional play at Atlantic. The girls showed commitment by traveling to Atlantic for a practice round on a Sunday afternoon.

"I wasn't real excited about taking a two hour road trip just for a practice round, but I found it paid off. There weren't any surprises the day of the meet. I knew what club to hit and where to hit it. It helped lower my score," said senior Heather Henning.

The team fell short of winning the regional tournament by 43 strokes. Although disappointed with this loss, they were satisfied with the chance to compete at the regional tournament.

Opening the season with their only defeat, the boys' team pulled together to overpower the rest of their opponents. They made it all the way > to the state tournament, finishing third in the district meet at Carroll.

"The weather was good for the district meet, and the kids played well. We were only six strokes away from Carroll, who won the district on their home course, and they are one of the better teams in the state," said Coach Frank Sanders.

The Dragons headed to the 3A State Golf Tournament for the second straight year. "We didn't place as high as expected. Most of us were disappointed with the way we played. We had the chance to win but were unable to pull through. The pressure of winning just got to us all," said senior Greg Beck.

Placing her ball in a better position, Junior Tammy Babcock takes advantage of the pick- and- place winter rule. This rule gave golfers relief from poor course conditions.

The score was 2-1. Johnston led over the defending state champions, Decorah, in the bottom of the seventh inning. Barnes had two strikes on the Decorah batter. Coach Mahoney signals a curve ball. Depending on the next pitch, this could be the final game of the season.

The most successful Dragon baseball season in seven years had taken JHS students away from their normal summer activities and out to Mr. Mahoney's prized field.

This success wasn't just handed to the team, however. Because of the young defensive line-up, the Dragons had to make up for inexperience in the field with hard work. Justin Allen said, "We really learned a lot about the game of baseball. You don't always have to have the greatest athletes to be a championship

The combination of competitive drive and team determination presented a dilemma for coach Jim Mahonev. "With twenty some outstanding players, it was hard to make up a line-up of only eleven guys," said Mahoney.

The road had been paved for Districts and the Dragons went head to head with Saydel, 'You don't always have Johnston won 7-4 against the Eagles. Nathan Hornback commented. "The Saydel game was my favorite. Jason Rollison's grand slam > brought a lot of life to our team that rode with us to state."

> Barnes throws a curveball. The Decorah batter swings and misses, but the ball ricocheted off home plate and past catcher Erik Halling. Decorah scored a run opening up for an eventual win, Decorah 3, Johnston 2.

> Although disappointed with their last game, the Dragons came together. Cam Christensen agreed: "We've started a tradition that will last for many years."

Swinging at a low pitch, hitter Jeremy Heinen hammers the ball into left field. Heinen finished the season with a .449 batting average.

As the 1992 softball season approached, the Lady Dragons looked toward it with much enthusiasm. They had been gradually improving with each year and this trend continued as they finished with a 14-22 record.

"We have a lot of really good individual athletes, but we couldn't pull it all together as a team. We had our ups and downs-we just needed to be more consistent." "We had our ups and downs -

said Jaime Johnson. Despite their 3-11 conference record, needed to be more individually the team recieved some high honors. Jenny Duckwoth and Mikee Grimes were named to the Dowling Classic Team as well as the North Tournament Team. Tera Buitenwerf was also placed on the North Tournament Team while Jaime Johnson walked away with tournament MVP honors. Johnson was later named to the All-Conference Second Team.

One of the strongpoints of the team was four good pitchers which made for an excellent rotation. Leading the way was Tera Buitenwerf with a 6-13 record and a 2.76 earned-run average.

Hitting, however, was one of the team's weaknesses. Johnson led the Lady Dragons with a .294 batting average which included a team high of 35 hits and one home run.

> When asked about the year, head coach Shari Walling said, "Throughout the season we got better and better. We were a young team that stuck together."

KEEPING IN

Don't mess up. Look straight ghead. Keep singing. Focus. This intensity was felt by members of Sound Advice. For the first time ever, the group placed at the Jefferson Show Choir Invitational.

"No one expected us to place, and it was areat to be a part of it," said sophomore Jeff Nietina.

One reason for Sound Advice's success was due to a new attitude and a more sophisticated look. The traditional black skirts were tossed out and classy sequined dresses were purchased. The choir lived up to this look by receiving an "Excellent" rating at the state contest. They didn't place at the Urbandale Invitational, but the aroup was satisfied with their performance.

Innovation's year was also intense. They earned a "Superior" rating at State and placed 1st runner-up at Urbandale.

Their show at Jefferson didn't go as well as they'd hoped. They spent extra time and effort makina a faked injury appear real in their controversial novelty number.

"My favorite part was watching the people's faces," said junior Joy Phillips. "There were even people running to get ice packs and calling the medics."

Some viewers were so worried about the incident that they failed to see the humor when they realized that it was planned. Innovation did not score enough points to qualify for the finals.

Innovation and Sound Advice ended the year by putting on a spring show entitled "An Evening with the Stars."

"I was very proud of both choirs," said instructor Jodell White. "I saw a high level of commitment and intensity throughout the year."

In an attempt to win back freshman Bryan Burkhardt's love, freshmen Renee Ebke and Megan Bengard plead for his forgiveness. The song *The Argument" was part of Sound Advice's contest set, which they performed at the Jefferson Show Choir Invitational.

It's easy to see that sophomores Jenn Morrison, John Davis, Elaine Jarnagin and Aaron Vislove their music. Their enthusiasm for the piece "My Music" made the show even more exciting to watch.

marching band, were challenged in an unusual way this year. One problem concerned the band greatly: over the summer Mr. Albrecht's cancer had returned.

The marching band and colorguard worked hard trying to make it easier for Mr. Albrecht during practice. "We tried to be more efficient on the field," said junior Stacia Purviance. knew Mr . Albrecht didn't have the energy to fight us."

However, the concert band dealt with a tougher problem: Mr. Albrecht's absence. This meant he woulldn't be able to conduct the spring concert or at State Large Group Contest.

Freshman Heather Tuttle performs "Beauty and the Beast, one of the five songs the concert band played at the winter concert.

Mr. Vic Anderson, director of colorguard and concert band the Des Moines Big Band, took over while Albrecht was gone. "It was difficult to come in at this stage of the game with the spring concert and State Large Group Contest only a few weeks away. I was glad the band was receptive to my leadership," said Mr. Anderson.

> Even with everyone's effort one obstacle was not overcome. The band received a II rating at State Large Group instead of a 1, which it had received for the past seven vears. "Most of us love Mr. Albrecht, and when you're that close to a teacher you tend to work harder for him. In this case it just wasn't enough," said junior lan Wardlow.

> Even though the band didn't receive a I rating, the spring concert went off without a hitch. Albrecht's surgery was successful. "I was glad he was able to return to his rightful position director," said sophomore Michelle Camden.

Working with other groups for a combined concert was a big part of the Sr. High Chorus and Jazz Band. Both groups worked hard on these concerts to entertain crowds with their musical abilities.

The chorus participated in three concerts including the combined concert on February 23. The concert consisted of all the choirs from fourth arade through the high school. The chorus sang two songs by itself.

The concert's finale was. "A Yankee Doodle, Stars and Stripes, Grand Old American Review." It was sung by all the choirs. "This was an important concert for the younger kids because they were able to see and hear how the chorus works. It was also important for the chorus to see what an impact they have on the kids," said choral director Jodell White.

The jazz band performed at three concerts and four contests. Their big project was the benefit concert for Mr. Albrecht. All proceeds went to him to help pay the medical expenses from his brain tumor.

The concert was held on May 11, and consisted of JHS jazz band, Hoover jazz, Valley I and II, and Bob Weast and his Swingin' Big Band. This concert was very important to all the jazz band "Mr. Albrecht has members. given so much to us. He's a friend more than a teacher. thought that this was a good way to give something back," said senior member Marne Myers.

Whether efforts were for the benefit of one, or community, the chorus and jazz band used their musical talents to the best of their abilities.

Small vocal ensembles performed throughout the evening and the concert choir finished the night with a short

Students were proud of their work's result, and as junior Heidi Zeiger concluded, they would recommend it to anyone. "I'm confident our dinner is worth seeing. The typical stereotype of cheerleading as a group of party girls who care more about their hair than the just-scored touchdown is quickly being proven wrong by the hard work and competitive spirit being put into the sport. This difference was made evident in the 1992-93 JHS cheerleaders and pom squad.

The season began with an invitation to perform at the 1992 Kickoff Classic football game. Johnston was one of nine squads chosen to participate in half time festivities at Meadow Lands Stadium, New Jersey.

girls spent approximately eight hours a day rehearsing dance moves, perfecting stunts and learning field positions. Sophomore Heather Zortman remarked "The about stunt practices: production woman wanted everything perfect. We had a great basket toss, but she knew how to make it even better. She pushed me up in the air, squeezing my hips so hard I thought they would break. But it made the toss better, and we looked great during the actual performance."

The trip East proved worthwhile. The squads were able to incorporate many of the ideas and techniques learned in New York into new and old cheers and dances.

"There were a few tough moments, but overall everyone worked well together. We had some of the best squads ever," expressed Captain Linda Kinney.

Whether strutting their stuff in front of thousands or yelling their Dragon Roar in Johnston, lowa, the cheerleaders and pom squad performed and participated, disproving stereotypes and raising enthusiasm to a higher level.

Two days before opening night the stage and props were all set. The lights , make-up and costumes were all prepared. Everything was ready; everything, that is, but the lead.

The spring play, Rest Assured, was close to being a catastrophy. Senior Joe Barnard, who had been cast as the lead, became ill and was not able to perform. After much deliberation junior Matt Nyberg was asked to fill in. "It was a very tough decision to make, and it was made even tougher because we had so little time until opening night. But, we knew if we put Matt in he would be able to do it and carry us through," said student director, sophomore Jill Norviel.

Nyberg was excused from two days of classes to prepare for the challenge. "I was scared of ruining the play for everyone. I had to learn everything; when to move and where to sit," said Nyberg.

He also used a small microphone which fit inside his ear to hear cues given by Norviel. "I was nervous because there were lots of times when I knew what Matt's next line was supposed to be, but I couldn't say anything because it would have gotten garbled up with what Jill was trying to tell him through the mike," commented senior Joanna Stookey, who played the part of Nyberg's wife.

Rést Assured premiered on April 2. The play was about a rich businessman, played by Nyberg, and how he changed his ways and became kind and generous. "I loved this play because of its meaning," said director Joan Kielhorn, "and with everything falling apart, the cast pulled together to make it even more meaningful."

"The combination of humor and drama by all the participants definitely made the play worthwhile and very entertaining," stated freshman audience member Bryan Burkhardt.

The near catastrophe was avoided and the play was preserved.

A. Skipping school. " One day, TPD decided to skip school to go to the Mega-Mall in Minnesota. We decided to really make this one count. We crammed into a two-person car and left. We had the time of our lives, and we only received two detentions."

-Tyler Knox

B. The Leadership Retreat. "Leadership was a blast. It was a time where everybody was able to really get to know everyone. The famous crying sessions were the sentimental part of it all. Though I'm sure the best part was being able to call Mr. Kinder 'Jerry."

C. Slobbing out. One week I chose to wear scummy, greasy, grudge apparel. My teachers spat upon my appearance, and gave me F's on all my work. My fellow students acted as if I ceased to exist. I should have listened to the big Double D.

By Jason Benbow and Lissa Smith HAT IS SOMETHING YOU'VE LEARNED IN HIGH SCHOOL?

- A Make every day count.
- B. Get involved.
- C. How to make friends.
- A. Make every day count. "During my four years of high school, I've learned that you have to make every day count. I regret not joining a bigger variety of clubs. I was new and wasn't ready to start over. Now I'm finished and will never be able to go back and change that mistake."

-Diana Linnehan

- B. Get involved. "I have learned to get involved by playing sports. Athletics were a big part of my high school career. Playing baseball allowed me to meet many different people with whom I have stayed friends."
 - -Mike Nicodemus
- C. How to make friends. "When I first entered high school I didn't have many friends. The one thing I learned is how to make them. I now have more than I ever thought possible. The best way to make friends is to be active. I think sports and other activities were very helpful. If you don't have friends then high school won't be as fun."

Homework is to juniors as _____ is to _____.

- A. Mr. Mahoney is to baseball.
- B. Tommorow is to procrastinators.
- C. Dead animals are to Mr. Partington.

A. Mr. Mahoney is to baseball. "After spending 45 minutes with Mr. Mahoney in class I hope my homework doesn't take me into extra innings."

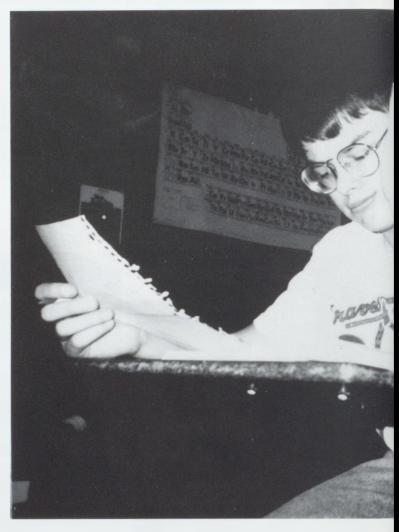

-Mike Remer

B. Tommorow is to procrastinators. "Trying to balance all your classes is tough. With everything that's going on during the week like student council, jazz band and swing choir, it's easy to just keep putting homework off until the last minute."

-Andy Offenburger

C. Dead animals are to Mr. Partington. "If I spent half as much time studying chemistry as Mr. Partington hunts, I'd surely get an 'A'. But all in all I'm glad I'm not his prey... or am 1?"

A. Getting ID' d for an "R" rated movie. "I was I D'd to go see Boyz in the Hood and finally talked my way into being let in because of my natural charm, but I was still really embarrassed."

-Shawn Humphries

B. Riding the school bus home. "I am unable to drive my car because my parents thought taking away my driving priveleges was a great punishment. So, everyday I do the hundred yard dash to the bus stop because I'm always late. The bus is always cold and the little kids yell and scream about the dumbest things. I get to school about fifteen minutes berore the bell, so I end up sitting around doing nothing. If I'm still riding the bus when I'm a senior, shoot me!"

- Jay Johnson

C. Being served liquor in front of parents and then being called a "youngin". " My family and I went out for dinner one night. When the waiter came and asked if he could get us something from the bar, everyone ordered alcohol and I got a Coke. When the waiter came back he got confused and gave me the screwdriver and my cousin the Coke. My family called me a youngin' and told the waiter to give the Coke to me."

- Jenny Smith

WHAT DO YOU DO IF YOU'RE GOING TO BE LATE?

- A. I call home and talk with my parents.
- B. I just walk in late and don't care what happens.
- c. I stay out later and have more fun.

A. I call home and talk with my parents. "If I don't call they would be very mad and as long as they know I'm O.K., they are pretty flexible about how late I can stay out. If I am late and I haven't called home, my dad will usually wait for me and as soon as I walk in the door he starts throwing explosives at me."

-Ryan Flynn

B. I just walk in late and don't care what happens. "My parents never know when I come in because they sleep downstairs, so they always think that I got home on time. It is pretty cool because they think I am home before my curfew, so I never get into trouble."

-Jaime Davis

C. I stay out later and have more fun. "When I'm going to be late, I figure 'what the heck,' so I stay out and party until I feel like coming home. I usually get into trouble the next day, but most of the time it's worth the punishment."

tudent leaders at activities ranging SADD, to showing new students what our school is like by SAIL.

"Showing the new kids around made me really nervous because you have to make your school something spectacular in order to reassure new students," said junior Joy Phillips. SAIL actively helped new students find their way around the crowded halls of JHS.

One activity organized by TLC was MORP, the reverse of prom. "The best part of MORP was the live band and when I got to get all grubby and go out to eat at McDonald's," said sophomore Jenn Morrison.

AIDS Week, another project JHS made quite of TLC, was highlighted by the makan impact with ing of the AIDS quilt and the drama "Secrets." This was a play perfrom MORP by formed by Drake University students TLC, to Red Rib- in hopes of educating high school bon Week by students about the facts of AIDS.

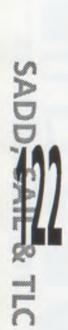

Friday Night Live, an evening of food, fun and relaxation, was held on May 21, "I was the MC and as with all TLC functions, it was nummy." said junior Andy Offenburger.

"SADD dealt mainly with Red Ribbon Week and prevention of drug use," said freshman Annie Mullenix. "We put red ribbons on each car in the parking lot symbolizing our partnership in a drug-free America."

SADD, SAIL and TLC members sacrificed a great deal of time as they organized many successful activities to educate, involve and just have fun.

ONG HOURS EARNING AND WORKING

ong hours were spent by the academic and political leaders of JHS to gain success in tough competitions and the stressful organization of activities.

The academic teams put in long hours studying to score high on their tough competition tests. Senior Mike Hulsebus said, "We had one person assigned to study a certain subject, and then they taught the rest of us what they learned." Some of the team members read books while others practiced essay questions. Junior Mike Remer said, "I thought the essay was the hardest part. They asked really difficult questions like, 'Where do you think you will be in the year 2000, and how will you contribute to society?' Who the hell knows?"

Student Council members also put in hard hours organizing school events like the Homecoming week activities. Sophomore Elaine Jarnagin said, "The night of the Club Olympics I was so stressed out and exhausted I thought I was going to cry. Looking back, though, I think it turned out all right."

Student Council also tried to meet the never-ending student demands. Student Body President Justin Allen said, "It was harder to get things done than I had expected. We had to work together and compromise a lot with other groups. If anything, I've learned patience."

Both groups' hard work and patience paid off. The academic team sent nine people to the state tournament while Student Council managed to survive another great Homecoming.

ORTHY STUDENTS ELCOME NATIONALS

ork, work, and more work. Sound like school? Nope. History Day and MockTrial required even more work and intensity than school.

History Day involved one topic which was used to form a final presentation. Seven students from Johnston produced projects relating to the theme "Communication in History." Three of those went on to the state competition, and freshman Robin Sanders qualified for the national competition.

What is the reward for all of this work? "It requires a lot of research," commented junior Jason Cox, "but in the end it helps you out. You can always use it as your next history report."

Another academic competition involving an equal amount of effort was Mock Trial. Students studied their witness parts and the law that went with the case for three strenuous months. Morning and afternoon practices were held, preparation being an essential part of this contest.

Junior Sam Noble enjoyed Mock Trial because it "combined many skills such as debating, acting, and thinking on your feet." Johnston must have perfected these skills because one team tried their case all the way to the national competition in Atlanta, Georgia.

There was an incredible amount of time and work put into these projects. However, plenty of academic and personal rewards were involved in each. "Receiving fourth place at nationals proved to me that all the hard work was worth it!" stated sophomore Rachel Graaf.

YING THE WORLD OGETHER WITH WORDS

he remnants remained: empty Twizzler bags; three-lettered words permanently markered on Queenie's desk; rulers, croppers and little blue pencils strewn between desks and tables. The door is locked, and Room Seven has survived one more deadline.

The two branches of journalism, newspaper and yearbook, shared the same goal of affecting the world around them with the written word, but used different methods in accomplishing it.

JHS In Black & White was distributed monthly. The paper took on a new face with different leadership. By becoming a better piece of literature with each issue, they managed to gain an IHSPA award. The Black & White illuminated many previously shady subjects, sometimes causing controversy among staff and students. "This school needed a paper. The staff did an excellent job of providing responsible and professional journalism," said Editor-in-Chief Jason Ranker.

In April the yearbook staff made the long awaited trek to the NSPA/ JEA Journalism Convention in Long Beach, California. This was what they needed to raise their standards, after having won two national awards. "Instead of being the intimidators, they were the ones being intimidated," said Advisor Leslie Shipp.

Despite distractions such as Barbie dolls, killer sunburns and frequent talks about sex, the yearbook staff managed to finish the task of compiling the history of this year into the 154 pages you now hold.

LEVATING AND XCITING CLUBS

very year brings change and this year was no different, as JHS produced a certain awareness. With the addition of TSA and the Drama Club, the induction of 46 new members, and the growing successes of Key Club and FCA, the organizations showed definite development.

One such club ws the National Honor Society, which was committed to recognizing and creating leaders to help in the community. "In downtown Des Moines we helped build low-income housing with Habitat for Humanity," said senior Jason Veeder.

A second group new to JHS ws the Technology Student's Association. Freshman Kevin McConnell stated, "We create inventions, draw blueprints and, build ideas."

Another new club was the Drama Club. Sophomore Emily Gelemino said, "We sponsored the school play, and a workshop was made available. But, being a neew club, we still have a long way to go."

Key Club came a long way by growing and becoming more active at JHS and in Johnston. "With the Kiwanas, we've volunteered at Bishop Drumm, had a car wash, and sold t-shirts," said sophomore Julie Cottrell.

Another important club was the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. "Often, we have speakers who talk about topics high schoolers deal with," said senior president Jill Olsen.

With so many leaders pushing to better themselves and Johnston, the clubs at JHS had the final say.

Mimicking the old woman in the Landrum Home for Elderly Ladies is "Al" the housekeeper, a.k.a. sophomore Lee Fillingsness. The Drama Club put on the play Capricious Pearls in December after tedious early morning practices.

Piaying a pancake-like aquaintance game at FCA, are junior Shannon McClure, senior Jill Olsen, and sophomore Matt Sundblad. Contrary to popular belief FCA was for everyone not just athletes or Christians.

Hy-Vee Bakery is the hot spot for many JHS students for a quick breakfast. Heldi Zeiger makes her choice for the most important meal of the day.

Support from many businesses and individuals in our community have made our ideas become reality. Whether the contribution came from a corporation, a small shop or the parent of a senior, we thank them. As a result of their help, we're successfully getting the word out.

Tom Miller

Dear Tom. Congratulations! We are so proud of you. We love you, Dad. Mom and Becky

Keep on smiling and the world is yours!

Love, Mom. Dad and Josh

Thank you! Your Johnston school days have given us 13 wonderful years of memories. We are very proud of you!

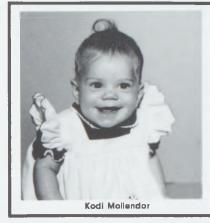

> Love, Mom and Dad

P.S. You were a "G.Q. Man" even back then!

Happiness is deep powder, groomed trails, homeruns, fifteen interceptions and YOU! You're great!

Love always, Mom and Dad

Add that smile to your personality and determination and you can be anything you want to be.

Love, Mom and Dad

Always a champion in our eyes! Best of luck, sunshine. We love you, ck, sunshine. We love you, Mom and Dad

Congratulations on all of your achievements and accomplishments. We are very proud of you and know you will excel in all that you strive for in the future.

Love, Mom and Dad Kinney Best wishes to the class of '93. We'll miss you!

"Reading was always my favorite pastime!"

Keep smilling and believing and good things will always come your way. We are all very proud of you and your accomplishments and will always love you.

Love, Mom, Tim, Karl, Amie, Grandma and Grandpa

CONGRATULATIONS, BRIAN!

You looked pretty good back in 1980 in a graduation cap, but it looks even better now, and we won't have to after the gown! You're a terrific young man and we wish you the best as you head off to the new adventures of college life.

Love, Mom and Dad

Sometimes we got discouraged because you were so small and always left finger prints on furniture and walls.

Now that you are growing up and becoming so tail, all those little hand prints are very hard to recall.

We Love You! Mom and Dad

Love, Dad and Mom

Who would have thought this cute little baby would have become such a dynamo! Congratulations and Good Luck! Love. Mom and Dad You've come a long way, babies! Good Luck!

Congratulations

and best of luck

in all you do!

It is possible to sit back and watch the seemingly endless words go by in life. But after seeing JHS, one would hardly think it imaginable. Just as a dictionary would not be whole without all the words, the school could not exist without each individual.

Reminiscing about this past year, one could envision all the good times he/she had experienced as well as the times that weren't all too pleasant. In times such as those it was helpful to have so many friends to whom you could turn; and, for some, those unhappy times may have turned to good memories as one realized who his/her true friends Were.

From placing second in state by the boys' club volleyball team to placing fourth at the national mock trial competition, Johnston had the last word in many events in which it participated. It has left a distinctive mark in lowa and even nationwide.

Combining the friends made and the achievements accomplished, one has a year full of fun and excitement. It's hard to think that it had to come to an end. All good things must end, however, and this year is no exception.

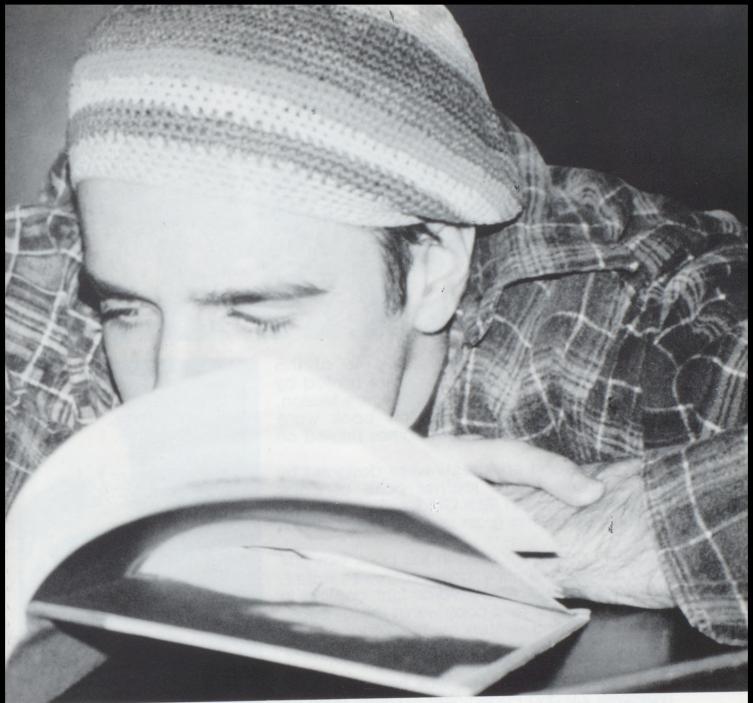

As the last student closed the last book, and the last locker was slammed shut, the year did come to an end. The halls emptied as the students left one by one after the last test, and the last blank filled by THE LAST WORD.

LAST WORD

Seniors Linda Kinney and Jenny Duckworth and sophomores Teresa White and Heather Zortman wave their last goodbyes.

The 450 copies of volume 46 of the Johnston High School Dragon were printed by Herff Jones, 6015 Travis Lane, Shawnee Mission, Kansas, 66201. Copies of this book were available for $24 or $26 with names printed on the cover.

Cover and endsheets were designed by David Ring using a leather base of color Evergreen 1510 with Rich Gold #15 and red foil for the theme. The grain used on left side was Mission.

The paper we used in this book was 80# Bond Special. All copy, unless otherwise stated, was typed in 10 pt. Avant Garde font, captions in 8pt. Photographs and copy within these pages were taken and written by the Dragon staff. Photographs were developed by Fo-Jo's, 60-Minute Photo, and Hy-Vee Photo.

Division page copy was typed in 14 pt. Typestyler 2.0 and Pagemaker 4.0 were used for the headlines. Typestyler was used for the side headlines, in Helvetica font.

Student Life headlines were made using Microsoft works 2.00a, 72 pt. and 10 pt.

Academics, Sports, Fine Arts, People and Organizations headlines all used Typestyler. CgFrontieraBd type-face was used for all of these headlines. However, different styles were used for variation.

Copy in Student Life, Sports and Organizations sections used text wrap in Pagemaker.
